

U.S. Interagency Intelligence Partnerships Supporting Future Military Contingencies Conference

COMMITTED TO EXCELLENCE IN DEFENSE OF THE NATION

About the Event

As United States Government agencies become increasingly operational, expeditionary, and capable of planning for and executing contingency responses there still remains much work to be done to build effective partnerships. I invite you to the DIA-sponsored U.S. Interagency Intelligence Partnerships Supporting Future Military Contingencies Conference on 1 December 2011 to advance critical dialogue addressing what the Intelligence Community should continue doing, or start anew in an era of persistent international conflict, increasing complex mission requirements, and decreasing resources.

This conference provides a platform encouraging participants to collaborate within a U.S. whole-of- government network to improve information dissemination and access to interagency capabilities, while strengthening existing and establishing new partnerships.

Your participation in this event demonstrates your commitment to working across boundaries to achieve shared goals and an integrated government response to issues concerning support to future military contingencies.
